Editorial Policy:

General:

THE OHIO JOURNAL OF SCIENCE considers original contributions from members and non-members of the Academy in all fields of science. While special consideration will be given to manuscripts concerned with Ohio subject matter, other reports with scientific merit will be reviewed for publication. Submission of a manuscript is understood to mean that the work is original and unpublished, and is not being considered for publication elsewhere. All manuscripts considered for publication will be peer-reviewed. The opinions expressed by reviewers are their own, and do not represent the views of the Ohio Academy of Science or THE OHIO JOURNAL OF SCIENCE. Manuscripts and illustrations should be prepared in triplicate in accordance with current guidelines published in THE JOURNAL at least once a year, and submitted to:

COVER PHOTO: White-tailed deer were extirpated from Ohio by 1904 due to unregulated shooting and extensive deforestation that occurred during settlement. The Ohio Division of Conservation re-established deer during the 1920s and 1930s in southern Ohio. Deer populations have increased dramatically in recent decades as farms abandoned during the depression era have reverted to brush and forests. The accompanying article (pp 112-122) documents how reproductive rates and body condition parameters of white-tailed deer have changed during this period of population growth.
