CRANKS AND COUNTERSHAFTS

Landlord: This room was formerly occupied by a chemist. He invented a new explosive.
Prospective Boarder: I suppose those spots on the wall are results of his experiments.
Landlord: Well, indirectly, yes. You see that's the chemist. —Exchange.

Old lady: Isn't it wonderful how a single policeman can dam the flow of traffic!
Boy: Yes, grandma; but you ought to hear the taxi-drivers.

"I'd like some rat poison."
"Will you take it with you?"
"No, I'll send the rats over after it."

A group of tourists were looking over the inferno of Vesuvius in full eruption.
"Ain't this just like hell?" ejaculated a Yank.
"Ah, zese Americans!" exclaimed a Frenchman, "where have zey not been!"

A GREAT ANNOYANCE
While a play was in progress a lady turned in her seat and said to a man behind: "I hope my hat is not annoying you?"
"It is, madam," was the reply, "for my wife wants one just like it." —Nebraska Blue Print.

Dean (addressing lazy student): Have you ever been up before me since the beginning of the quarter?
Student: I don't know, sir. What time do you get up?
—California Engineer.

ANTICIPATION
He: I think I've got a flat tire.
She (disgustedly): Oh, give me a chance. We're not a block from home yet.
—Iowa Engineer.

She: Very well, then, I'll commit suicide.
He: O.K. But don't let me find you hanging around here.

Mother—Now, Willie, I want you to go in and get acquainted with the new nurse and kiss her nicely.
Willie—Yes, and get my face slapped like papa did.
—Exchange.

She—I can't light this match. My foot's too small.
He—Light it on your—er—. Here—better let me light it.
—Auburn Engineer.

Identity of the young lady is withheld, but the memory of her answer lingers on with the instructor of a high school science. One of the requirements in the written quiz was: "Define a bolt and nut and explain the difference if any."
The girl wrote, "A bolt is a thing like a stick of hard metal such as iron, with a square bunch of windings on one end and a lot of scratching wound around the other end. A nut is similar to the bolt only just the opposite, being a hole in a chunk of iron sawed off short, with wrinkles around the inside."

Night Watchman: Young man are you going to kiss that girl—
James (straightening up): No, sir.
Night Watchman: Here, then, hold my lantern.
—Armour Engineer.

She (playing the piano): My, how that song haunts me.
He: It ought to; you just murdered it.

SALESMANSHIP IN RUSSIA
General: How're things?
Captain of firing squad: Oh, I've got a few prospects lined up.
—Auburn Engineer.

Actor: I insist on real food for the banquet scene.
Stage manager: Very well, then, you shall have real poison in the death scene. —Exchange.

"Do you regularly attend a place of worship?"
"Yes, I'm on my way to see her now."

Prof: I believe you missed my class yesterday.
Student: Why, no, Professor, not in the least.

If you're caught in hot water, be nonchalant and take a bath. —The Technograph.

"Well," remarked a friend after inspecting a friend's new yacht, "I wish I could afford a place like this."
"Yes," replied his friend, "You married men have the better halves, but we bachelors usually have the better quarters."

Hubby (on phone): "So, honey, I'll be awful busy at the office and won't be home till late."
Wife: "Can I depend on that?"

Now they manufacture weather for telephone testing

A test illustrating work in the Bell Telephone Laboratories is made with the weatherometer. This device produces rain and sunshine to order, and determines the weather-resisting properties of telephone equipment.

This test indicates an interesting habit of the men engaged in telephone research. It is to get sure knowledge bearing on efficiency, economy, life and reliability of apparatus.

Information is sought continuously during the development of a design, in advance of manufacture and of course long before the equipment gets into use.

Men who delight in thoroughness of method find that the opportunity is there.
