PROFESSOR ROBERT GORDIS:
The Man and His Works

With the aged is wisdom
In length of days is understanding.
(Job 12:12)

This volume of the Hebrew Annual Review is dedicated to Professor Robert Gordis, a distinguished Hebraist and a prominent Biblical exegete. Professor Gordis was born on February 6, 1908 in New York City. The story of his life is that of a steadfast commitment to two domains: scholarship and the pulpit. He has excelled in both realms.

As a scholar, Professor Gordis proved to be gifted with a remarkable fertility. His literary output, as can be discerned in his appended list of selected works, is immense, constituting numerous books and an enormous number of articles published in scholarly journals around the world. His studies are indicative of a profound grasp of the intricacies of the vocabulary, grammar and syntax of Biblical Hebrew (poetry and prose) and Aramaic, and a vast knowledge of cognate languages. This, together with his exquisite love for the Hebrew Scriptures and the literary and esthetic sensitivity with which he is endowed, has enabled him to delve into the deeper meaning of Biblical passages, verses and words. Thus, for example, his studies on Biblical wisdom literature in general, and on the Book of Job, in particular, have considerably furthered our knowledge of this perennially enigmatic area of scholarship. His insights, which are in many cases trail-blazing, are articulated in a forcible and vivid manner.

Professor Gordis' academic record is exemplary. While the principal focus of his teaching career was his alma mater, the Jewish Theological Seminary (1931-1974), he also served on the faculties of Columbia University, Union Theological Seminary, Temple University and Hebrew University of Jerusalem, and he taught at Syracuse University, the University of Michigan and other institutions.
He has lectured throughout the United States and Canada, as well as in England, France and Israel.

Professor Gordis has never isolated himself in the insulated ivory-tower of scholarship. His life is inextricably intertwined with that of society. Rabbi Gordis is widely recognized as an outstanding religious and spiritual leader, exceptionally gifted with the ability to penetrate into the most profound issues of life and to instill into his audience a love for human values. His writings in this domain address inter alia ethical and moral issues of contemporary society, incorporating insightful teachings of both Judaism and Christianity. In his various capacities as president of the Rabbinical Assembly, the international association of the Conservative rabbinate, president of the Synagogue Council of America, the over-all body representing all wings of American Judaism, chairman of numerous religious organizations and cultural agencies, Rabbi Gordis has proved to be endowed with a spirit of free enquiry, unyielding to the shackles of conformity, asserting his own individual thought. These and other characteristics enabled him to blaze new trails into fundamental issues of Jewish life and in the interpretation of various aspects of the Halakha.

Professor Gordis is the founder and editor of the quarterly journal Judaism, dedicated to Jewish religion, philosophy and ethics, now in its thirty-second year of publication. He has been serving on the Editorial Board of the Hebrew Annual Review since its inception in 1976. It is indeed an honor and a privilege to dedicate this issue of the HAR to him.

The Hebrew Annual Review has as its fields of interest the Bible and the Hebrew language and literature. Hence, many of Professor Gordis’ colleagues, students and friends, whose fields of expertise lie elsewhere, were not invited to participate in this volume, to our regret, and no doubt to theirs. But we hope that all of those whose lives he has touched will share our pleasure in this commemoration of his outstanding career.

Reuben Ahroni, Editor

Hebrew Annual Review
ROBERT GORDIS:

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BOOKS

The Biblical Text in the Making—A Study of the Kethib Qere (Dropsie, 1937).
The Jew Faces a New World (Behrman, 1941).
The Wisdom of Ecclesiastes (Behrman, 1945).
Conservative Judaism—An American Philosophy (Behrman, 1945).
Koheleth—The Man and His World (Jewish Theological Seminary, 1951).
The Song of Songs (Jewish Theological Seminary, 1954); Chinese version (1960).
Judaism for the Modern Age (Farrar, Straus, 1955).
A Faith for Moderns (Bloch, 1960).
Leave a Little to God (Bloch, 1967).
The Song of Songs and Lamentations (KTAV, 1973).
The Book of Esther (Rabbinical Assembly, 1974).
Understanding Conservative Judaism (KTAV, 1978).
The Book of Job—New Translation, Commentary and Special Studies (Jewish Theological Seminary, 1978).

BOOKS EDITED

Max L. Margolis—Scholar and Teacher (Dropsie College, 1952).
Jewish Life in America (with Theodore Friedman) (Horizon Press, 1955).
Art in Judaism (with Moshe Davidowitz) (National Council on Jewish Art, 1975).

PAPERS (SELECTED)

“Jewish Education in New York City,” Menorah Journal (Nov. 1929), pp. 133–44.
The Significance of the Paradise Myth,” American Journal of Semitic Languages 53 (1936), pp. 88–94.
“Jesus and His Modern Kinsmen,” Reconstructionist (Feb. 25, 1938), pp. 5-10.
“Sex Morals of Modern Youth,” Reconstructionist (July 1, 1938), pp. 5-9.
“The Jewish Community and Its Historical Background,” Reconstructionist (May 5, 1939), pp. 7-15.
“Rabbi Saadia Goan,” American Jewish Year Book, 44 (1942), pp. 61-72.
“Authority in Jewish Law,” Reconstructionist (Nov. 17, 1942), pp. 8-17.

"The Social Background of Wisdom Literature," Hebrew Union College Annual 18 (1944), pp. 77-118.

"How to Read the Bible," Jewish Heritage (1957), pp. 236-56.

“Qadmūsah ʿel hammasorāh ʿeʿor sīfrūt hazal ʿumegillōt yam hammelāh,”
“The Church, the State and the Will of God,” Christian Century (Dec. 31,
“A West-Semitic Cognate to Suhatu,” Journal of Semitic Studies 5 (1960),
pp. 151–52.
“Lešōn hammīqrā ʿeʿor lešōn haḵāmīm,” (Biblical Hebrew in Light of “Qoheleth and Qumran—A Study in Style,” Biblica 41 (1960), pp.395–
410.
“Natural Law in the Modern World,” Jewish Frontier (Sept. 1961), pp. 9– 15.
19–24.
68–77.
“Lisegullōt hammēlisah bekiṭhē ḥaqqōdeš,” (Rhetorical Usage in the Bi-
“The Biblical Tradition: Its Teachings About Race,” Jewish Affairs (South “Toward a Philosophy for the Conservative Jewish Day School,” Proceedings of the Rabbinical Assembly (1962), pp. 58–82.
“Brother Daniel and His Brother Jews—The Paradox of the Decision,”
“The Uniqueness of the Jewish People,” Congress Monthly (Feb. 18,
7–8.
“Religion and the Free Society,” The Time of Harvest: Abba Hillel Silver and Other Studies, ed. A. Altman (1963), pp. 60–78.
“Bible Translations Throughout History,” National Jewish Monthly
(1963), pp. 8–10.
“Jewish Learning and Jewish Existence, Retrospect and Prospect,” Leo Baeck Memorial Lecture (pamphlet) (1963), pp. 1–34.

“From Emancipation to Liberation: A New Era in Jewish History,” (Boston Hebrew College; pamphlet), 1971.

“ʿAḥab, ʿImmi vaʾahōṭi, Lešōnēnū” (1971).

“Neḥʿaʿat Yōnāh ben Amīṭṭai miggat haheper ″ Hāgūt yisrāʾēl Baʾamerīqa,"” vol 1, pp. 112-120.

“A Cruel God or None,” Judaism, 21 (1972), pp. 277-84.

“Israel and the Diaspora,” Jewish Spectator (Fall 1975), pp. 11-18.

“Israel and the Diaspora: A Reassessment,” *Proceedings of the Rabbinical

"Sex in Judaism (Reprint from Love and Sex), Jewish Spectator (Summer 1980), pp. 17-21.

"Does Secular Judaism Have a Future?" Judaism 30 (1982), pp. 228-32.

