The Journal of Amish and Plain Anabaptist Studies welcomes manuscripts, both theoretical and empirical, about plain Anabaptist groups, including Amish, Apostolic Christian, Brethren, Bruderhof, Hutterite, Russian Mennonite, Swiss Mennonite, and related movements. Under normal circumstances, the manuscript should be no more than 10,000 words, including tables, figures, endnotes, and references. Abstracts may be up to 200 words. Citation and referencing style is similar to the American Journal of Sociology (http://www.jstor.org/page/journal/amerjsoci/instruct.html).

Chapter from an edited volume:

Dissertation, thesis, or unpublished paper:
Friedrich, Lora J. 2001. To Be or Not to Be: An Examination of Baptism into the Amish Church. Doctoral dissertation in Rural Sociology. Columbus, OH: The Ohio State University.

Given the multi-disciplinary nature of Amish and Plain Anabaptist studies, authors may use the Chicago Manual of Style (Turbian) when the above style would force an unnatural fit. A bibliography is still required using the above formatting.

The journal further seeks to include the rigorous research of members from plain Anabaptist communities, who are invited to submit manuscripts for special consideration. The circumstances and formatting as abovementioned apply.

All manuscripts may be submitted by email (preferred) or postal mail to Cory Anderson (cory@beachyam.org) or Joseph Donnermeyer (donnermeyer.1@osu.edu), Kottman Hall 210, 2021 Coffey Rd, The Ohio State University, Columbus, OH 43210.
