

Fredrik Logevall of Cornell University, co-editor of The Dilemmas of Power: American Foreign Policy Under Nixon, Kissinger and Ford, welcomes participants to Nixon in the World: American Foreign Relations, 1969-77 on Dec. 1, 2006, at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies.

Jeremi Suri, University of Wisconsin-Madison, and Andrew Preston, Cambridge University and co-editor of The Dilemmas of Power, discuss Suri's paper on American grand strategy at the Nixon in the World conference, held Dec. 1-2, 2006, at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies.

Robert J. McMahon, Ralph D. Mershon Professor of History at The Ohio State University, presents a paper on “The Danger of Geopolitical Fantasies: The Nixon Administration and the South Asia Crisis of 1971” as Peter Hahn, Professor of History at The Ohio State University, and Gary R. Hess, Bowling Green State University, listen at the Nixon in the World conference, held Dec. 1-2, 2006, at the Mershon Center. McMahon organized the conference.

(Left to right) Jason Parker, Post-Doctoral Fellow at the Mershon Center; Mary Sarotte, Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton; and Jennifer Siegel, Assistant Professor of History at The Ohio State University share a moment at the Nixon in the World conference, held Dec. 1-2, 2006, at the Mershon Center.

Randall Schweller, Professor of Political Science at The Ohio State University, provides comments during the “Détente and Arms Control” session at the Nixon in the World conference, held Dec. 1-2, 2006, at the Mershon Center.