Isabel Hull, John Stambaugh Professor of History at Cornell University, speaks about her book Absolute Destruction: Military Culture and the Practices of War in Imperial Germany on May 10, 2007, at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies. Hull argues that the practices of the Imperial German Army, unchecked by civilian institutions, increasingly aimed for absolute destruction of the enemy as the only guarantee of the nation’s security.