

The Mershon Center for International Security Studies, the Department of Economics, and the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences at The Ohio State University invite you to a lunch featuring:

Joseph Stiglitz

Winner, 2001 Nobel Prize in Economics

“Has the New Millennium Repealed the Old Economic Laws?”

Thursday, October 7, 2004

12:00 p.m.

The Ohio State University Faculty Club
181 South Oval Drive
Columbus, Ohio

Valet Parking Available. Lunch will be served; please R.S.V.P. to Julie Rojewski, rojewski.2@osu.edu, or (614) 292-7529 by Monday, October 4, 2004.

Joseph Stiglitz won the 2001 Nobel Prize in Economics (with George Akerlof and A. Michael Spence) for their work on the impact of asymmetrical information of market systems.

Stiglitz has authored numerous books, including his most recent, The Roaring Nineties and Towards a New Paradigm in Monetary Economics. Other works include Globalization and Its Discontents, Peasants versus City Dwellers: Taxation and the Burden of Economic Development, and New Ideas About Old Age Security; Toward Sustainable Pension Systems in the 21st Century.

Stiglitz is currently Professor of Economics and Finance at the Columbia University Graduate School of Business. He was previously on the faculties of Stanford, Princeton, Yale, and MIT. He also has been Senior Vice President and Chief Economist for the World Bank, Chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, and an Associate at the National Bureau of Economic Research and the Institute for Policy Reform.

