

Vincent Pouliot (left), assistant professor of political science at McGill University, stands with Ted Hopf, associate professor of political science at Ohio State University. Hopf was responsible for bringing Pouliot to the Mershon Center to speak about "International Security in Practice: The Politics of NATO-Russia Diplomacy."

A full audience of faculty and graduate students enjoyed a lecture by Vincent Pouliot, assistant professor of political science at McGill University. Pouliot visited the Mershon Center on March 11, 2010 to speak about his current research, which focuses on NATO-Russia relations, reform of the UN Security Council, and the global governance of security.

Vincent Pouliot, assistant professor of political science at McGill University, gave a lecture titled "International Security in Practice: The Politics of NATO-Russia Diplomacy" at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies. Pouliot was awarded the 2009 Vincent Lemieux Prize by the Canadian Political Science Association for the best dissertation in political science.

After his lecture at the Mershon Center, Vincent Pouliot (right), associate professor of political science at McGill University, continued conversation with Alexander Wendt (left), Ralph D. Mershon Professor of International Security.

Vincent Pouliot (left) and Ted Hopf (right) discussed Pouliot's most recent book, International Security in Practice: The Politics of NATO-Russia Diplomacy, which was published by Cambridge University Press in 2010. Pouliot gave a lecture of the same title at the Mershon Center on March 11, 2010.