

Jane Hathaway, professor of history, introduced Isa Blumi, assistant professor of Middle East and East European history and Middle East studies at Georgia State University, before his lecture at the Mershon Center on May 12, 2010.

Isa Blumi, assistant professor of Middle East and East European history and Middle East studies at Georgia State University, delivered a lecture at the Mershon Center titled, "Why Yemen Now? Reassessing South Arabia's Recent Past." Blumi's lecture was co-sponsored by the Department of History, Department of Near Eastern Languages and Cultures, the Center for Slavic and East European Studies, and the Mershon Center for International Security Studies.

Isa Blumi (left) discussed some points raised in his lecture, "Why Yemen Now? Reassessing South Arabia's Recent Past," with John Mueller (right), Woody Hayes Chair of National Security Studies. Blumi, assistant professor of Middle East and East European history and Middle East studies at Georgia State University, visited the Mershon Center for International Security Studies on May 12, 2010.

Isa Blumi, assistant professor of Middle East and East European history and Middle East studies at Georgia State University, continued discussion after his lecture, "Why Yemen Now? Reassessing South Arabia's Recent Past." Jane Hathaway (left), professor of history, and Stephen Hyland (second from right), graduate student in history, coordinated Blumi's visit to the Mershon Center for International Security Studies on May 12, 2010.