
This is the first issue of a new geographical journal, which will appear irregularly. Each issue will be devoted to a different theme; in this issue, the theme is the Common Market. The issues are to serve as surveys of some current research activities, and should be useful as supplementary course materials for teachers. The format is attractive and the illustrative material well done for a publication of this price.

E. D. Rudolph