FIRST TERM—June 21 to July 28

Code Pleading. Three credit hours, six hours each week. Mr. Fornoff.

Consideration of series of problems involving real parties in interest, joinder of parties and causes, class suits, the scope and statement of causes of action, the steps and methods of pleading and the use of counterclaim. Briefs are required upon problems assigned, with special use of assigned cases and readings. Class discussion will not be confined to materials in the casebook.

Sunderland's Cases on Code Pleading, 2nd Edition.

Constitutional Law. Seven credit hours, seven hours each week. Mr. Strong.

A study of American constitutional law as developed through an examination of the jurisdiction, powers, techniques and functions of the Supreme Court of the United States. The greater part of the course is devoted to the functions of the Court in umpiring federal-state and state-state relationships and in balancing governmental and private interests. Consideration of these functions involves the study of the basic constitutional doctrines of due process, police power, full faith and credit, obligation of contract, privileges and immunities, equal protection, inter-governmental immunities, commerce among the states, and separation of powers. Although emphasis is thus upon federal constitutional law, similarities in constitutional doctrine together with occasional reference to doctrines unique to the States, serve to provide as well a background training in state constitutional law.

Material to be announced.

Contracts. Eight credit hours, eight hours each week. Mr. Ley.

Offer and acceptance, consideration, third party beneficiaries, assignments, joint rights and duties, statute of frauds, performance of contracts, conditions precedent and subsequent, impossibility, illegal contracts, and discharge.

Corbin, Cases on Contracts.

Trade Regulations. Four credit hours, eight hours each week. Mr. Stevens.

A study of anti-trust and other regulatory legislation designed to effect legal control of industry on the basis of competitive capitalism. In orienting this study, attention is directed first to the evolution of industrial techniques; second, to other schemes of legal control of production which have been evolved, including recent legislative experimentation; and in summation, to possible and proposed alternatives in industrial technique and public control.

Casebook to be announced.

SECOND TERM—July 29 to September 3

Constitutional Law. Mr. Strong.

The portion of Constitutional Law covered in its first term is a prerequisite.

(For description of the course, see above, First Term.)

*Open to beginning law students and other persons without law training.

Contracts. Mr. Ley.

The portion of Contracts covered in its first term is a prerequisite.
(For description of the course, see First Term.)

Insurance. Three credit hours, six hours each week. Mr. Fornoff.

A study of insurance law and practice with particular reference to fire, life, and automobile insurance. Discussion of the underlying principles of insurance, such as insurable interest, warranties and representations, waiver and estoppel as well as a construction of the specific clauses of the standard policies.

Casebook to be announced.

Specific Performance. Three credit hours, six hours each week. Mr. Vanneman.
General scope of the remedy of specific performance; part performance with compensation; part performance in the statute of frauds; equitable conversion by contract; misrepresentation, mistake and hardship as defenses to specific performance.

Cook's Cases on Equity, Volume II, 2nd Edition.

ADMISSION

(1) Students in good standing at The Ohio State University College of Law may register for the summer session and receive credit toward a degree. Beginning law students must comply with the regular requirements for admission which are administered through the University Entrance Board. Students who are not enrolled in the College of Law and who wish to take courses for credit toward the degree of some other College at this University must comply with the regular requirements for admission which are administered through the University Entrance Board.

(2) Transient Students: A student in good standing in any law school having entrance requirements of two or more years of pre-law work, and who expects to return to his former college, will be admitted as a transient student. His registration will terminate at the end of the Summer Quarter, and his credits will be transferred to his own institution. He will not be required to submit a full transcript of credits, but must present to the University Entrance Board a statement from his Dean or Registrar that he is in good standing and that his work will receive credit in his own college. If at the end of the Summer Quarter he wishes to remain in this University, he must then secure a complete transcript of credits and apply to the University Entrance Board for readmission.

FEEES

A registration fee of $20.00 for residents of Ohio, and $45.00 for non-residents is charged for each term of the summer session. In addition a matriculation fee of $15.00 is charged for first admission to the University.

If additional information is desired, write to the Dean of the College of Law, The Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.
