

Editor's Note

Readers of this third volume of Proceedings will note that documentation throughout, both for lists of works cited and for endnotes, follows as nearly as possible the conventions of the fourth edition of the MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers. So that a consistent format for subsequent volumes can be achieved with a minimum of editorial intervention, I urge future contributors to use the Handbook as their guide when preparing essays for submission.

My thanks to all contributors to this volume (whatever their original formats) and my thanks to all those who offered their good work, but for whom, alas, space was wanting.

I am deeply grateful to those who have served as readers for this volume (in many cases responding to an essay with two or three pages of commentary beyond the standard evaluation form) or who have helped direct me to specialist readers: Margaret J. Ehrhart, Randi Eldevik, Nona Flores, John B. Friedman, Loren C. Gruber, Thomas J. Hatton, Norman Hinton, Patricia Hollahan, James F. Hoy, Harriet Hudson, Richard Kay, Douglas Kelly, Christopher Kleinhenz, Norris J. Lacy, Russell J. Meyer, Charles Oriel, E. L. Ridsen, Lois Roney, Jon Wilcox, and William F. Woods.

The Emporia State University Department of English and its chair, Russell J. Meyer, have been, as always, generous with equipment, supplies, and secretarial time. Angela Pfeifer, resourceful student secretary, has been largely responsible for entering and formatting text, converting computer files, and deciphering, draft after draft, my sometimes nearly impenetrable editorial marginalia.

Mel Storm
Department of English
Emporia State University