OHIO STATE JOURNAL OF CRIMINAL LAW

Volume 4 Number 2 Spring 2007

SYMPOSIUM

MERCY AND CLEMENCY

Questions of Mercy
Stephen P. Garvey ...............................321

Forgiveness in Criminal Procedure
Stephanos Bibas ........................................329

Some Naive Thoughts about Justice and Mercy
David Dolinko ........................................349

The Intrusion of Mercy
R. A. Duff .............................................361

The Morality of Mercy
Heidi M. Hurd ........................................389

Remorse, Apology, and Mercy
Jeffrie G. Murphy ..................................423

Mercy, Clemency, and the Case of Karla Faye Tucker
Mary Sigler ............................................455

Repentance and the Liberal State
John Tasioulas .......................................487

JUSTICE HARRY A. BLACKMUN LECTURE

From Omnipotence to Impotence: American Judges and Sentencing
Judge Nancy Gertner ................................523
COMMENTARIES

They Released Me From My Cage...But They Still Keep Me Handcuffed: A Parolee’s Reaction to Samson v. California
   James M. Binnall ................................................................. 541

Distorted Reflections of Battered Women Who Kill: A Response to Professor Dressler
   Joan H. Krause ................................................................ 555

Connectedness and Its Discontents: The Difficulties of Federalism and Criminal Law
   Dan Markel ..................................................................... 573

State Criminal Justice and the Challenge of Ex-Offender Mobility
   Wayne A. Logan ............................................................... 587

Practicing What I Preach: A Professor in the Venire
   Theresa A. Severance ..................................................... 597

The Liberal Assault on the Fourth Amendment
   Christopher Slobogin ...................................................... 603

REVIEW

An Account of Mapp v. Ohio That Misses the Larger Exclusionary Rule Story
   Thomas Y. Davies ............................................................ 619