Table of Contents

Preface ........................................................................................................................................ iv

Ah…Ah! An exploration of the Korean discourse marker 야! (Ah) in Instant Messages (IM)
Hanwool Choe ........................................................................................................................ 1

Importation or inheritance? Thoughts on the Japanese lexicon
Alexander T. Francis-Ratte ...................................................................................................... 5

Masked priming investigation of cross-linguistic “false friends” with Japanese EFL learners
Seth Goss ..................................................................................................................................... 9

Classifiers and unaccusative verbs in Cantonese
Charles Lam ................................................................................................................................ 12

On the sentence-final de in the shi…de focus cleft in Mandarin Chinese
Wei Song .................................................................................................................................... 17

The (non)use of a third-person pronoun kanojo ‘she’ in L1 and L2 Japanese narratives
Shinsuke Tsuchiya .................................................................................................................. 23

[Yi+N] in Mandarin Putonghua
Qian Wang ................................................................................................................................ 28

Pragmatic functions of verbal -le
Hongjuan Zhao ....................................................................................................................... 33
Preface

The eight short entries published in this inaugural volume of Buckeye East Asian Linguistics are based on abstracts that were accepted for the 2014 Buckeye East Asian Linguistics Forum, which included formal poster presentations on Friday, October 24, 2014 at The Ohio State University Columbus campus (http://u.osu.edu/beal/).

We would like to take this opportunity to thank all the presenters and participants who came to the Forum to share their ideas, and in particular, the two keynote speakers Professors Ik-sang Eom and James Marshall Unger. Many faculty members and graduate students in the East Asian linguistics community at OSU served on the organizing committee and/or helped with the Forum in various ways. Our sincere gratitude also goes to them. The Forum was generously supported by the following sponsors: Institute for Chinese Studies, Institute for Japanese Studies, Institute for Korean Studies, East Asian Studies Center, Department of East Asian Languages and Literatures, Department of Linguistics, College of Arts and Sciences, Graduate Association of Chinese Linguistics, Graduate Students of East Asian Languages and Literatures, Council on Student Affairs (all at OSU), and U.S. Department of Education (via a Title VI Grant).

Zhiguo Xie & Tsz-Him Tsui
Editors of Buckeye East Asian Linguistics (Vol. 1)

osu.beal@gmail.com

Buckeye East Asian Linguistics (BEAL)

Buckeye East Asian Linguistics is a new open-access online publication launched in 2015. It is dedicated to the empirical study of languages spoken in East Asian countries/regions, including cross-linguistic research that draws on East Asian languages. It is edited by the faculty members and graduate students in the East Asian linguistics community at The Ohio State University, and published by the Knowledge Bank, which is administered by OSU Libraries. It aims to help disseminate the most updated research of East Asian linguistics to the global scholarly community so as to encourage and foster the widest communication and collaboration among scholars interested in East Asian linguistics.