THE advancement of the art and science of med
HE advancement of the art and science of med icine, like any other science, is fundamentally The idea of looking inside the body without mak ing an opening, for example, grew out of the dis covery of $x$-ray. Then came ideas of making visible parts and motions within the body not naturally isible to x -ray.
A succession of ideas and instruments has now roduced two exciting new instruments-or rathe stems-that have already contributed substantial y to medical science and will continue to do so These are the Cine-fuorograph, commonly called rapid x-ray camera. Both are complex and expen sive systems to install and operate, requiring team of persons with highly specialized knowledge and kills. These circumstances limit their use to a umber of major medical centers such as the State University Health Cente
The image amplifier system in University Hospital occupies two connecting laboratories and re uires the services of several others to function on a television screen or record on motion picture lm the working of the valves and chambers inside he heart and the heart's great vessels. From the films can be determined the location and nature o ongenital and disease-caused defects; whethe hey can be corrected by surgery; and, if so, th ature of operation best suited to the problem.
The image of the heart in action is formed on a ontact photocathode on the large screen frees light electrons which are then accelerated by high voltage in a vacuum tube to a tiny screen. The combination of light acceleration and image reduc ion increases the image's brightness 3000 times nough to record the image on motion picture T.

Thus, this electronic assembly holds the amount the afe level and still provides sufficient light to record the motion picture of the heart on film The valves and chamber inside the heart are made visible to x -ray by a dye, a contrast mate ial containing iodine, which is injected into the eart through a very slender tube (catheter) in erted in a blood vessel. The patient seldom need $n$ anesthetic, but receives a sedative
The valves and chambers act very fast and the onds. To capture this fast motion, a high-speed camera takes 30 to 60 frames of pictures per sec ond. After the film is developed it is studied in slow motion by a medical-surgical team

The Schonander bi-plane rapid x-ray camera also is used to study the heart as well as the brain such organs as the lungs, liver, spleen, kidney, and the large blood vessels of the arms and legs. Here too, the patient receives a contrast material in a blood vessel.
X-ray films are taken from two directions (at a 90 -degree angle) simultaneously in a sequence o 3 to 6 pairs per second. Cameras are operate pally
If, for example, a patient with symptoms of a is to be examined, the dye is entered in a large is to be examined, the dye is entered in a large head and the procedure is over in six to seven sec onds. In the interval, 18 to 36 films are expose depending on the nature of the suspected defect being diagnosed.
In an adjoining laboratory the film is developed in six to seven minutes by completely automatic mediately if necessary

Before the Schonander bi-plane system was developed in Sweden several years ago, the patient was required to undergo similar examination at least twice, adding materially to discomfort of the patient and the work to the hospital staff, and, consequently, to the expense. Even then the re sults of the examinations were far less accurat because the pictures could not be taken simultane ously in two planes of direction.
This system enables the physician to quickly tumors of the brain, and circulatory defects in vital areas of the body and with much greater accuracy than was possible just a few years ago
Both of these systems play vital roles in research The development of the Schonander bi-plane camera, for example, has made possible the surgical operations in which damaged or malformed large arteries, including the main artery, the aorta, can now be repaired oraving operations
The initial cost of installing these two systems in the Department of Radiology amounted to a quarter-million dollars, $$ 85,000$ for the image amplifier and $$ 140,000$ for the Schonander bi-plane rapid x-ray camera.

 ELCOME HOME!The HOMECOMING committee of 1961 welcomes you - the OHIO STATE ALUMNI, who, since 1882, have met annually to renew HOMECOMING traditions. Once again you will revive old memories by visiting familiar places and seeing old friends.
Last evening, outside Ohio Stadium, thousands gathered for the traditional bonfire rally. We "set the earth reverberating with a mighty cheer" when Coach "Woody" Hayes introduced the "BUCKEYES."

The Ohio Union was jammed as thousands of students danced and then cheered the HOMECOMING queen and her court.
At half time today, the lovely HOMECOMING queen and her court will be introduced, having been named in a popular election, similar to those held annually since OHIO STATE was admitted to the Western Conference in December of 1912.
After today's game, fraternities and sororities will hold open house so that you may meet the undergraduates and see the wonderful HOME COMING decorations.
Welcome back! The student senate and the HOMECOMING committee extend to you their heartiest greetings and invite you to enjoy every minute of your 1961 HOMECOMING.

Big Ten Offers Complete Athletic Program

THE Big Ten, known nation-wide as one of th 1 strongest football conferences, also has one of he most complete and versatile intercollegiate and intramural programs of any conference.
Complete schedules are played in football, basetball and baseball with an unofficial champion declared in each sport. Championship meets are conducted in cross country, fencing, golf, gymnas acs, swimming, tennis, indoor and outdoor track gan State and Minnesota-compete among themselves in hockey.
This is only a portion of the total program offered by schools within the Conference on an intercollegiate level. Michigan State and Ohio tate compete in soccer, with the Buckeyes also providing a schedule in lacrosse. Wisconsin has year-round training in crew, meeting national op ponents in the spring.
Among the 10 schools, 28 different sports and ecreational games are conducted on an intramura asis in addition to programs in all of those sport run on an intercollegiate basis.

This rounded program includes Archery, badminton, 150 pound basketball, bocci, bowling, boxing, canoeing, codeball, handbal, horseshoes, judo, paddleball, relays, rifle shooting, sailing, skating, skish, softball, speedball, skills, squash, table tennis, touchball, touch foot ball, indoor and outdoor volleyball, water polo and weight-lifting.
In cooperation with the United States Olympic Association in its development program, the Big Ten is embarking on a promotional program within its individual schools on three of the Olympic sports that have been particularly weak in international competition-canoeing, water polo and weight-lifting.
More than 270 men are on the staffs of the 10 Conference schools in administrative and coaching capacities to direct the intercollegiate program in ddition to the individual intramural department which conduct the various sports and recreational programs for the entire student bodies.

BIG TEN COMPETITION . . .
Football competition in the Big Ten is fierce. This conference perennially produces the nation's strongest football teams. It's keen competition that allows Central Ohioans to witness the best college football here in Columbus each year. When we make our weekly food purchases we are privileged to choose from many of the nation's finest food markets. The fodit in Columbus rank amo market to offer higher quality food products at more competitive prices Super Duper Markets welcome this keen competition and pledge to their customers and competitors to continue to further the high standing of Central Ohio food markets. The public approval of Super Duper's premium food products at competitive prices has enabled Super Duper Markets to grow from one store to seventeen stores in just six years. Yes, competition benefits us all

menthol fresh

rich tobacco taste -modern filter, too

Take a pufir. it's Springtime! When you light a Solem, you can almost imagine yourself in this scene - all golden sunlight and new green, with air so fresh. Salem is the most refreshing cigarette of all, for its High Porosity paper "air-softens" every puff. Rich-tasting, too, with the full flovor of fine toboccos. Smoke refreshed...smoke Salem!
