BEYOND AFFLICTION: The Disability History Project, a series of four one-hour programs distributed by NPR.

Straight Ahead Pictures and National Public Radio are pleased to announce BEYOND AFFLICTION: The Disability History Project, the story of disability in the United States, told as it has never been told before: in a historical context. Laurie Block, series’ creator, host and producer, takes us on an intriguing journey to uncover the common history shared by people with the full spectrum of disabilities and their families since the Civil War. NPR’s Talk of the Nation will broadcast related coverage, part of which will be hosted by John Hockenberry.

As the name suggests, BEYOND AFFLICTION is designed to move the general public BEYOND the “affliction myth” and into a more authentic perception of disability community reality, past and present.

BEYOND AFFLICTION: The Disability History Project is produced by Laurie Block and Jay Allison, and was broadcast in May 1998. For more information visit our Web site: <www.npr.org/programs/disability>.

Generous underwriting support for BEYOND AFFLICTION comes from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, AT&T, the Massachusetts Foundation for the Humanities, and the California Council for the Humanities.

The University of Illinois at Chicago is pleased to announce the creation of a new academic department of the University. The Department of Disability and Human Development (DHD) offers interdisciplinary academic training providing graduate level education focused on the intersection of disability and human development. The Department offers the Master of Science degree in Disability and Human Development with an opportunity for students to concentrate their major study in three key areas of specialization: disability policy and organization, disability studies, and rehabilitation technology. A Doctor of Philosophy degree in Disability Studies is also offered. This Ph.D. is an interdisciplinary degree program offered jointly by the Department of Disability and Human Development in collaboration with the Department of Occupational Therapy and the Department of Physical Therapy.

Admissions: The MS in Disability and Human Development admits students to begin in either the Fall or Spring Semesters. The Ph.D. in Disability Studies admits students to begin only for Fall Semester. Admission is open to qualified persons who hold undergraduate or graduate degrees from accredited colleges and universities. Persons from minority backgrounds, including persons with disabilities, are encouraged to apply. Please indicate whether you are interested in the M.S. or Ph.D. program when inquiring. Application materials may be obtained by writing to: Graduate Admissions, Department of Disability and Human Development, College of Associated Health Professions, University of Illinois at Chicago, 1640 W. Roosevelt Road, Chicago, IL 60608-6904.

THE BODY AND PHYSICAL DIFFERENCE
Discourses of Disability

"The Body and Physical Difference is a pathbreaking, germinal work, bringing together essays that are consistently illuminating, incisive, and important. Each forces us to rethink the intellectual stranglehold of an unspoken, unacknowledged 'ableist' ideology in the humanities. Each illuminates that, as Kenzaburo Oe has observed, we can only truly understand a culture when we know how its disabled members see it, read it, understand it, critique it. This work marks the coming of age of a movement that will, ultimately, mark as significant a change in our understanding of our profession—and human interaction—as the movements against the oppression of racism, homophobia, and sexism."
—Louise DeSalvo, Hunter College

"[This] anthology presents the widest spectrum of 'disability studies' and will serve in the future as the benchmark against which such studies are measured." —Sander L. Gilman, University of Chicago
