

WORKING PAPERS IN LINGUISTICS NO. 11

By

James T. Heringer, Patricia D. Miller,
Lawrence C. Schourup, and Richard H. Wojcik

Department of Linguistics

The Ohio State University

Columbus, Ohio 43210

February, 1972

Working Papers in Linguistics No. 11

Introduction

This issue of Working Papers in Linguistics treats a variety of topics. Heringer's contribution (also submitted as a Ph.D. dissertation, August, 1971) and Wojcik's translation from Russian concern aspects of syntax and semantics. Schourup's paper (the winner of the O.S.U. 1971 Prize Essay Contest in Linguistics) examines a classic question in historical linguistics. Miller's work (also submitted as an M.A. thesis, June, 1971) explores problems in phonological theory.

With this issue, the publication of Working Papers in Linguistics has been released from ties to departmental grants and is financially self-supporting. Future issues will include collections of papers on single topics (e.g., acquisition), as well as diverse collections like this one. Each number will have its own editor.

Arnold M. Zwicky

Table of Contents

	Page
Introduction . . . . .	ii
Heringer, James T. Some Grammatical Correlates of Felicity Conditions and Presuppositions . . . . .	iv
Wojcik, Richard H. Translation from Russian of "Tipologija kauzativnykh konstruktsii (The Typology of Causative Constructions)" by N. Medialkov and G. Silnitskii . . . . .	111
Schourup, Lawrence C. "Why Sound Change is Gradual" .	127
Miller, Patricia D. Some Context-Free Processes Affecting Vowels . . . . .	136