

Preface

The Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution is proud to commemorate its first year as the official publication on dispute resolution for the American Bar Association Section of Dispute Resolution. The Journal welcomes the opportunity to play a role in charting the development of a new and challenging area of law.

Associate Dean and Professor of Law Nancy Rogers of the Ohio State University College of Law, a noted scholar in the field of dispute resolution, introduces this edition of the Bibliography Issue. Assistant Professor Kimberlee K. Kovach of South Texas College of Law, the Budget Officer of the ABA Section of Dispute Resolution and a member of our National Board of Advisors, follows the introduction with a thoughtful commentary on a recent publication addressing a unique and potentially beneficial use of mediation.

The Bibliography Issue is composed of hundreds of entries covering a wide range of recent developments in the ADR as well as long-standing issues with which practitioners continue to grapple. It is meant to serve as a valuable tool by which practitioners can access information on an area in the forefront of the law.
