

Life's Blink of Color

Sometimes I wonder if God gave us the seasons so we could see different wonders and beauties that were all part of his plan. So that we could learn to move on through seasons in our being. I used to go through the motions of the season
But now, through the lenses of wisdom, I can experience all the seasons in one moment
No longer will we ever be told we cannot change
No longer will we cease to learn
Don't ever let anyone say that we aren't remarkably designed to be exactly everything we are
What we do with it is our prerogative and judgment