

Bernard Haykel, professor of Near Eastern Studies at Princeton University, visited the Mershon Center for International Security Studies on May 20, 2010 to deliver a lecture titled, "The Salafis, the Wahhabis and the Nature and Doctrines of Global Islamic Movements." Haykel's visit was organized by Georges Tamer, M.S. Sofia Chair in Arabic Studies, and Bill Liddle, professor of political science. Haykel's lecture was co-sponsored by Honors and Scholars, the Department of Political Science, the Middle East Studies Center, the Department of Near Eastern Languages and Cultures, and the Mershon Center for International Security Studies.