

Sangeeta Mahapatra, Fulbright-Nehru Doctoral and Professional Research Fellow and Mershon Center Visiting Scholar for 2009-2010, gave a lecture at the Mershon Center on April 30, 2010 about the "Rise of Red Terror: The Ethics and Effectiveness of Maoist Violence in India."

Sangeeta Mahapatra, Fulbright-Nehru Doctoral and Professional Research Fellow, gave a lecture at the Mershon Center on "Rise of Red Terror: The Ethics and Effectiveness of Maoist Violence in India." Mahapatra, a visiting scholar at the Mershon Center for 2009-2010, used her time at the Mershon Center to work on a comparative study of counterterrorism strategies of India, Israel and the United States.

Sangeeta Mahapatra, Fulbright-Nehru Doctoral and Professional Research Fellow, and John Mueller, Woody Hayes Chair of National Security Studies, discussed some of the points Mahapatra raised in her lecture on "Rise of Red Terror: The Ethics and Effectiveness of Maoist Violence in India." Mahapatra, a 2009-2010 Mershon Center Visiting Scholar, lectured at the Mershon Center on April 30, 2010. During her time at the Mershon Center she worked on a comparative study of counterterrorism strategies of India, Israel and the United States.